

Erratum

Erratum to: “Why do men insult their intimate partners?” [Personality and Individual Differences 43 (2007) 231–241]

William F. McKibbin <sup>a,*</sup>, Aaron T. Goetz <sup>a</sup>, Todd K. Shackelford <sup>a</sup>,
Lucas D. Schipper <sup>a</sup>, Valerie G. Starratt <sup>a</sup>, Steve Stewart-Williams <sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Florida Atlantic University, Department of Psychology, 2912 College Avenue, Davie, FL 33314, USA

<sup>b</sup> Department of Psychology, Neuroscience, and Behaviour, McMaster University, 1280 Main Street West,
Hamilton, Ontario, Canada L8S 4K1

Available online 12 July 2007

The headings in Table 1 of this article appeared incorrectly. A copy of the correct table headings are

Study 1: Correlations between men’s self-reports of partner-directed insults (total and four components) and mate retention

Partner-directed insults	Mate retention categories
	Direct guarding	Intersexual negative inducements	Intrasexual negative inducements	Positive inducements	Public signals of possession
Total	.36	.30	.27	-.09	-.07
Derogating physical attractiveness	.18	.13*	.12	-.17	-.11
Derogating value as a partner/mental competency	.32	.30	.25	.05	.00
Derogating value as a person	.28	.23	.21	-.16*	-.10
Accusations of sexual infidelity	.36	.29	.35	-.05	.00

*  $p < .05$ .

**  $p < .01$ .

***  $p < .001$ .

DOI of original article: 10.1016/j.paid.2006.11.027

* Corresponding author. Tel.: +1 954 236 1179; fax: +1 954 236 1099.

E-mail address: wmckibbi@fau.edu (W.F. McKibbin).